Lieutenant Conrad Crawford, 47th Infantry, formerly a reporter on the staff of "The Evening Sun," was killed in action on Wednesday of last week, according to newspaper dispatches received yesterday. He was the leader of one of several platoons which had orders not to retreat under any circumstances. He fell at the crest of Hill 220, but his men did not retreat.

Crawford was twenty-four years old and served as a corporal in the 7th Regiment on the border. A brother, Captain Gilbert Crawford, is adjutant of the 302d Engineers. Another brother, Captain Merritt Crawford, is a company commader in the 7th Regiment of the Senate amendment extending that privilege to officers of the army, navy and Marine Corps. The substitute provides that army officers and Military Academy cadets only shall be supplied uniforms and accourtement at cost upon application, but subject to departmental regulations which may limit their cost and quality.

The House managers accepted the Senate amendment providing that wives of soldiers and sailors shall not be disqualified for government positions because of marriage.

Floyd Gibbons Predicts German Peace Offensive

War Correspondent, Sounding Warning Against Great Teutonic "Drive" Next Winter, Says Enemy Will Offer to Restore Belgium and Return Alsace-Lorraine

"The greatest of all the German of- that is the reason for the coming peace "The greatest of all the German offensive attacks is coming next winter.
It will not be directed against the soldiers fighting on the various fronts. It will be directed against the public in the United States, England, France and Italy. It will be a peace offensive."

This warning peace
"It will be a hard fight, a bad fight,
before the Allies can lick Germany, can be finished, and the world will never be safe either for democracy or any other independent form of government outside of Germany so long as

The terms Germany will offer will be most attractive. She will promise to be a good girl for ever and ever. She will promise to give up and restore and ever sail of occupied France and Belgium. She will promise to give up and restore and ever raine. She will give further guarantees of good faith, and it will be hard for you to steel yourselves against her tempting beguilements.

"Germany's agents will argue that further bloodshed will be useless, that it is of no use for American parents to sacrifice the blood of their sons fighting an enemy that wants to settle. "The fact of the matter is that Germany is now in the position of a bully who has struck a man while he was getting out of his overcont, and who wants to call off the fight the moment the man has released his arms and is ready to flight back.

"But remember this, that the Allies have now discovered that they can lick the Boche, and the Boche has discove

This department is engaged in separating the sheep of advertising, and of the service which backs up advertising, from the goats-and hanging a bell on the goats. It invites letters describing experiences-pleasant or unpleasant-with advertisers, whether they be manufacturers, wholesale houses, retail stores or public service corporations. It will print those letters which seem to show most typically how an advertiser's deeds square with the words of his advertising. Only signed letters, giving the writer's address. will be read. The name will be printed or withheld, as preferred. Address: The Ad-Visor, The Tribune, New York.

I HAVE been asked to join a Ford Owners' Association in my town. The fee is $10 a year, and they offer to supply my gasolene at cost for one year. Can you advise me?

Figure it out for yourself. Assume that you will buy all of your gasolene from that one stand. Just fail to remember that a car in running out of gasolene is no respecter of your wishes in the matter of location, and count on your particular car always running out in front of the Ford Owners' station. The average retailers' profit on gasolene is 2 cents per gallon. Your Ford car should run on a fair average 6,000 miles per year. It should make not less than twenty miles per gallon. On this mileage you would consume 300 gallons in going 6,000 miles. At 2 cents per gallon you would save just $6 per year and pay $10 for the privilege.

IN WEIGHING a sirloin steak charged to me by my butcher at two pounds I found it two and a fraction ounces short of the weight charged for. I do not want to go to a lot of trouble over two ounces of meat, but it does seem to me that something should be done to stop the practice. What do you advise?

A. B. C.

The methods of stock selling used by Andrews & Co. have engaged the attention of The Ad-Visor before. Under date of August 1, 1917, we commented upon telegrams which they were sending broadcast in their endeavors to sell stock in the Smith Form-A-Truck Company. Andrews & Co. at that time were wiring individuals whose names appeared upon their lists, many of whom were total strangers to them, that Smith Form-A-Truck was due for a rise in price, and that they were holding a definite number of shares for this particular individual. It is not a rule without exception, but it is fairly safe to say that the stock salesman who uses ballyhoo methods in the sale of securities is offering the public a guest ballyhoo methods in the sale of securities is offering the public a questionable value for its money.

Coming in on the New York, New Haven & Hartford yesterday morning to meet a friend from the West who was going to join me for a game of golf at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club, I stopped off at 125th Street to be sure of making connections with him.

As I had had no breakfast, I passed several lunchrooms until I noticed one with a particularly clean and attractive window display. The quickly served breakfast was all that could be desired, but, in rushing to catch the train I handed out a $5 bill instead of a $1 bill, as I supposed, and did not discover my mistake until some time lafer.

This morning, in stopping off, I found $4 awaiting me. The name of the place is Cutler's Lunch Room. It is on the south side of 125th Street a few doors east of the New York Central Station.

J. L. M.

Score one for Cutler's. That $4 will be paying interest as long as they stay in business, no matter where they move. J. L. M. will walk blocks to eat there. He will tell it to his friends and they will walk blocks. The moral involved in that transaction is a basic principle

PEW adult Americans can resist the temptation of treating them-selves when they are ill. Just as the small boy loves to take the family alarm clock apart and drench its clumsy interior with kerosene—and then weeps when it won't work—so the same boy with kerosene—and then weeps when it won't work—so the same boy grown to man's estate loves to pour oils and active drugs into his sensitive interior (since he cannot take it apart), and then weeps when it no longer "works." Experimentation is one of the keynotes of our national character; and if a man hasn't a regular laboratory, he'll use his internal mechanism for the purpose. Up to a certain point, this is an innocent and harmless indoor sport—in treating one's self for colds in the head, "morning-after" headaches and cut fingers. But beyond the point where the nature of the injury is obvious, and where the possibility point where the nature of the injury is obvious, and where the possibility of error is small, self-medication is one of the costlest and most dangerous experiments of the age.

In a bulletin issued by the U. S. Public Health Service department on "The Limitations to Self-Medication" the dangers of self-treatment are considered not only from the viewpoint of the individual wellbeing, but from the viewpoint of the community—the viewpoint of wasted production of diminished national resources as a result of unnecessary sickness. tion, of diminished national resources as a result of unnecessary sickness and death. This bulletin sets forth the "uses and abuses of proprietary preparations and household remedies." According to the writer, the greatest danger in self-medication lies in the taking of secret prepara-tions. "The individual who desires to medicate himself should know that the human body is a complete aggregate of cells, the metabolic func-tions of which may be interfered with in many ways, and that no two organisms will react exactly ables which may be interfered. organisms will react exactly alike under given conditions. . . To guard himself efficiently against the possible untoward effects of potent drugs it is essentially necessary that the individual taking a mediane be thoroughly well informed regarding its nature and composition, and be reason ably well informed regarding the properties and actions of the drugs that are included. . . . It has been suggested that the purchasers of a medicinal preparation insist on accurate and complete information regarding its nature and composition, and the following arbitrary rules have been proposed as a guide:

Acceptable remedies must be:

"1. Preparations regarding which accurate and complete information is given as to the amount and the kind of active drug or drugs in a given quantity of the preparation.
"2. Preparations regarding which no claims are made as to curative properties or specific action, unless such properties or action can be readily and satisfactorily demonstrated.
"3. Preparations regarding the possible untoward action of which an adequate and proper precautionary notice is given.
"4. Preparations free from objectionable quantities of alcohol and habit-forming drugs.

habit-forming drugs.
"5. Preparations the names of which do not suggest curative properties or specificity."

Let us apply these standards to a few of the widely advertised rem edies. Nuxated Iron claims curative properties, and gives no warning of a possible untoward action of the nux vomica, and so violates the second and third of the government standards for acceptable remedies. Tanlac violates the first, second, third and fourth standard by (1) failing to give its formula; (2) by making claims of curative effects; (3) and (4) by giving no warning of the possible untoward effect of the 16 per cent of alcohol which it contains. So much for the "tonics." "Var and (4) by giving no warning of the possible untoward effect of the 10 per cent of alcohol which it contains. So much for the "tonics." "Varne-sis" is marketed under a secret formula, thereby violating the first standard; it claims to cure rheumatism, thereby violating the second standard; and although it contains 13 per cent of alcohol, it gives no precaution as to the possible untoward effects thereof, thereby violating the third and fourth standards.

But the government bulletin does not only comment on the medicinal remedies. It has a word for the "drugless healing" methods, as well: "The followers of cults or -pathys, who pride themselves on their abstinence from drugs, frequently overlook the fact that foods, like drugs may have a decided influence on the normal reactions of the human body, and that many exterior forces can produce changes in the normal physio-and that many exterior forces can produce changes in the normal physiological functions of the body, resulting either directly or indirectly in texemias as profound as any produced by drugs. The several problems involved in the misuse of non-medicinal remedies for disease have as yet received but scant attention in the popular discussions on the prevention and treatment of diseases, but they obviously offer an almost illimitable field for study and research and certainly engagest the imperative need field for study and research, and certainly suggest the imperative need for the dissemination of accurate information."

If the government ever undertakes this non-medicinal remedy investigation, it could do no better than to take an issue of "Physical Culture and have its and base its investigations on the advertisers therein. We venture to say that an investigation conducted into the "cuits" and "-pathys" advertised in a single number of "Physical Culture" would, when completed afford an exhaustive study of all of the "problems involved in the mis-use of non-medicinal remedies for disease."
